HAPPY NEW YEAR!

By JEFF GREENE

KINGSTON

To the shortage of gas and electric power, now add a shortage of will power. It was clearly in evidence in Kingston the other day.

We stood at the corner of Wall Street and Main on a recent afternoon and asked people a question that seemed appropriate enough to the time: "Have you made a resolution for the coming new year?"

Out of 40 people polled, these were the results: 27 people made no resolutions nor did they intend to. The remaining 13 people who did make resolutions expressed little faith in keeping them.

For instance, a determined Jim Newell of Kingston said he resolved "to take it easy on all the chicks next year." But, Jim added, "I made a resolution last year not to drink any more and haven't wound up drinking any less."

Out of the resolutions of the 12 other people who did make them were two to "study harder," three to "give up smoking," three to be "generally better," and four to "lose weight." But, said Janis Evans of Hurley with a sheepish grin, "I vowed to lose weight last year and didn't lose a pound."

drawn from this confusion it is that people just don't realize where their real problems lie.

The people who didn't make resolutions didn't do so for a variety of reasons, the most common being that "New Year's resolutions never work." "I vowed last New Year's the money to give a New Year's resolution any thought. "If things don't change," said an elderly Kingston man, "then the new year can only be worse."

One young Kingston girl, sounding somewhat resigned, said she didn't make any New Year's resolutions because "every year I'm my same rotten self." Another Kingston girl, with a heartening degree of self-assurance, said she made no resolutions because "I never do anything wrong."

There were at least a few hearty souls who didn't let the crisis get them down. Rosalind Fitzgerald, with commendable courage, pledged to "get it together" during the upcoming year. Helen Smith of West Hurley said she is "going to be very, very good," and Isabelle Otley of Kingston said she would "try to be premyt." "I'm a little late usually," said Mrs. Otley, "and I got to be on time."

A number of people questioned were not included in this poll—the ones who said "are you kidding?" or grunted and walked away.

On Resolutions for the New Year

We consider it not at all significant that the four who resolved to lose weight were women and the three who resolved to give up smoking were men. Two of the women were smoking cigarettes when they made their resolutions and three of the four men who said they would give up smoking were overweight. If there is a conclusion to be Eve not to stay out all night," said a Woodstock man, "but I didn't get home until noon the next day and I realized then that all my other New Year's resolutions would be for naught."

Then there was Christmas, which at least seven people said was so hard this year that they didn't have the time or

1974 Gets Ready for Its Big Debut

Say goodbye, 1973. It's been fun, despite a little inflation here and a few empty gas tanks there. But now it's 1974's turn. Tonight, merry midnight revelers will greet the new year with a chorus of blaring horns and champagne bubbles, and then recover Tuesday with some pretzels, and Alka Seltzer and nine glorious, consecutive hours of televised college football. Although some may be too young to take part in the traditional celebration, these four youngsters do their share by steadying 1974 for it's big night on the town. From Michael Devine, Sherry Clogston, Donna Taylor and Jennifer Haines (L-R) ... a Happy New Year and a safe New Year's Eve. (Freeman photo by Haines)

Another Cent Hike In Gasoline Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. energy head William E. Simon said today that service stations will be allowed to hike gasoline prices by one cent per gallon because of reduced allocations. He rejected various reports that oil tankers have backed up at some U.S. ports waiting to unload cargoes. He said there were only "isolated cases" of backlogs.

Simon claimed that long delays and queuing up for cars to buy gasoline at service stations was "pretty much confined to the large metropolitan areas" during the holiday season. "If that became widespread throughout the United States, then that would be, in my opinion, intolerable," he said.

Simon denied that the major oil companies were holding back domestic production in order to profit from fuel shortages. "The wells indeed are producing at a 100 per cent efficiency rate at this time," he reported.

Simon said the United States has been making limited Arab purchases despite their embargo. "The leakage has been 600,000 barrels a day during the embargo," Simon noted. But he declined to identify the sources in order to prevent any cutoffs.

Simon said the United States has been making limited Arab purchases despite their embargo. "It's going to get a lot worse because we're going to make less gasoline. We're getting down to where we're talking about eight to ten gallons of gasoline per week per driver."

"We're still riding off Arab oil, and we've been drawing on our stocks, but we can't continue to do this sort of thing," the source said. "No more ships are coming and we can't draw down on our stocks any further."

His comments came as motorists experienced their second consecutive holiday weekend of long lines and empty pumps. Fewer automobiles than usual for a New Year's weekend took to the nation's highways and there were reports in Washington that turnpike traffic nationwide was down sharply.

A second investigation also was started by the energy office and four East Coast states. It concerned reports that oil tankers were waiting offshore for oil prices to rise before unloading their cargoes.

Besides the energy office, the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut had begun or were preparing to begin investigations. However, an administration spokesman and spokesmen for the ports of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and New Haven said they did not think there was much to the reports. The administration source put current gasoline stocks at around 200 million barrels, enough for about 30 days at the current rate of consumption of 6.7 million barrels a day. He said that if stocks dropped below 180 million barrels the result will be shortages more severe than already have occurred — "spot shortages, city shortages, where a city is out of gasoline," he said. "People still don't believe there's a shortage. They feel it's a conspiracy, a way to raise prices and so forth. We're trying to tell them that come January or February it's going to be rough and that's all there is to it unless driving is cut back," he said. Demand for gasoline this weekend resulted in the closings of numerous gasoline stations that had anticipated being open on Monday. Reports of price gouging kept local and federal officials on the lookout. But the extent of higher and illegal prices was not immediately determined, although dozens of complaints were found to be valid.

Weather and Fuel Woes Dim Holiday

United Press International

Most of the nation's gas stations are closed until after New Year's Day, and there were some temper-snarling scrambles Sunday for the last drops of gasoline.

A 17-year-old gas station attendant in Detroit was held by police Sunday after he admitted fatally shooting a motorist who refused to pay for gasoline. Police said the youth told them he thought the customer was reaching for a gun when he put his hand in his pocket after refusing to pay.

Spot checks across the nation by United Press International Sunday found that service stations open for business ranged from about a dozen of the 1,200 in St. Louis, Mo., to as high as 30 per cent in parts of Ohio, the South and West.

Most dealers said the pumps would stay locked up until after

New Year's when they get the first supplies for 1974.

There were long lines at many Ulster County gas stations today, with motorists apparently anxious to fill up in case they can't get gas Tuesday or Wednesday. Most stations in Ulster County indicated they would be open today, but that they'd take the holiday off. And all the service stations contacted said they expected to have enough gasoline to last the day, even with the extra heavy business that's expected.

In one respect, it might be a good idea that some motorists are grounded this holiday. The National Weather Service predicts heavy snow for this area throughout the day and tonight, with a chance of freezing rain early Tuesday morning. The highways will be doubly treacherous tonight for unsteady New Year's Eve celebrants. Gasoline was scarce around New York City. There were waiting lines outside the few service stations that were open, and short-fused tempers occasionally exploded into harsh words.

Dwindling gas supplies prompted the New York City Police Department, left with just over a day's supply on hand, to cut down on the use of patrol cars and send more officers out on foot patrol. A police spokesman said there were 35,000 gallons in police tanks, about 10,000 gallons more than a normal day's usage, and the department was "nervous" about getting fresh supplies.

"In the past, we could just call up and be sure of getting deliveries the next day," said the spokesman. "Now we can't. So we're not taking any chances."

Nixon Signs New Flood Insurance Law

(Combined Wire Services)

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — President Nixon signed a new law today expanding federally subsidized flood insurance protection as a substitute for federal disaster relief loans.

The new Flood Disaster Protection Act increases by at least 100 per cent the limits of insurance coverage available at an average 40 per cent below cost to homeowners and businessmen who live in flood-prone communities that enter the program.

The communities enter by adopting approved land use and land management controls.

Nixon said in a statement: "Under the act, homeowners and businessmen and others will be able to purchase significantly increased amounts of flood insurance at reduced rates. For example, homeowners will be able to purchase up to $35,000 of insurance at rates of only 25 cents per $100 of coverage. The owner of a $20,000 home can thus buy full coverage for only $50 a year. Small businessmen and others can avail themselves of up to $200,000 of coverage."

Nixon said that by substituting insurance for disaster loans, victims would get help that was "speedy, direct and with minimal red tape."

In another action, Nixon signed six bills permitting sale of some $900 million of federally stockpiled aluminum, copper, zinc, molybdenum, silicon carbide and opium.

A Nixon statement said the items could be sold "without detriment to our national security interests." Aides contended sales would help hold down the prices of such metals as aluminum and copper.

The sales, to take place over several years, will provide revenues to partially offset budget spending.

Nixon, who flew here by commercial airliner last week to set an energy-saving example, has been joined by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger who came the same way, but on a different airline.

Taking his cue from the President, Kissinger left his government plane at home and flew to Los Angeles on a regular TWA flight. Nixon, in an unprecedented move by a president in office, flew as a first class passenger on a United Airlines jumbo jet last week, saying he wanted to save fuel and set a good example during the energy shortage.

"Nixon appeared to be settling down at the Western White House for a lengthy stay well beyond the first of the year. He was chipping away at a stack of bills, including the two-step 11 per cent increase in Social Security benefits, which he plans to sign."

In the last Knesset, the two Labor parties had 56 seats and the National Religious party's 12 members gave Mrs. Meir her majority. This time she may have to seek an alliance with Likud, or at least modify her territorial policy to give the hawks some satisfaction.

Because of the remoteness of some military outposts, the final results may not be known until Wednesday night, election officials said.

One late opinion poll gave Labor 49 seats and Likud 48 in the 120-member Knesset, as the parliament is called. But most men and equipment, many of the polls showed about 30 per cent of those questioned were undecided.

Mrs. Meir and her colleagues are too old and their reflexes too slow to mount an adequate guard against future Arab attacks.

Likud, headed by the pre-independence underground leader Menachem Begin, promises a younger, more dynamic leadership. But many Israelis find Begin too hawkish.

The election finds the Israeli voter more dissatisfied with the Laborites than at any time since 1948. Because of the unpreparedness at the outset of the war and the heavy losses in the occupied territories would make Israel vulnerable to attack.

State Puts Brakes on Movers

ALBANY phone access from all parts of the state to its complaint offices in New York City and Albany. The toll-free numbers will be announced.

"The new rules are designed to remove the causes of justified consumer complaints about underestimated moving charges, poor pickup and delivery service, and the handling of claims for loss or damage," Schuler said.

"They also will have the effect of strengthening the position of the great majority of household moving firms which share the department's concern for the consumer and which also deplore the erosion of public confidence caused by the activities of movers of lesser business integrity."

Included in the new rules will be provisions governing advertising and solicitation, determination of charges, probable cost of services, order for service, receipt or bill of lading, reasonable transportation time, dispute as to charges, signed receipt-release, and claims for loss, damage or overcharge.

Some of the department's rules are parallel to those regarding interstate household goods movement, while others go beyond Interstate Commerce Commission requirements, Schuler noted. He indicated that the rule regarding the satisfaction of judgments against movers resulting from consumer claims is unique in the nation. The proposed rule has a time limit of 60 days for the satisfaction of such judgments.

The department's jurisdiction includes some 950 carriers which transport household goods between points within the state, including about 650 which operate in the New York City Commercial Zone, but does not extend to moves conducted wholly within the commercial zones of upstate cities.

Child Abuse Hearings

KINGSTON A public hearing on the problem of child abuse, a problem of increasing importance nationwide, will be held Monday, Jan. 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the Ulster County Office Building.

The purpose of the hearing is to inform the public of the ramifications of new child abuse legislation passed by the State Legislature and effective this past Sept. 1, to relay the magnitude of the problem to Ulster County, and to seek cooperation and ideas in dealing with the problem. The public is invited to speak on the subject.

Bernhart S. Kramer, commissioner of social services, said Ulster County is not immune to the child abuse problem, and that a total community effort is needed to combat it. A child protective unit is being developed within the Ulster County Department of Social Services, as required by the new state legislation.

GILMAN: Speed Impeachment

WASHINGTON, D.C. proceedings detracts from their By moving the inquiry for the faith in our governmental The House Judiciary Com- objectivity, lending credence toward as fast as possible, processes which has been so mittee should speed up its study of impeachment "to restore public faith in government," he Gilman said, "we help to badly shaken by the events of restore to the American people he past months."

Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman (R-26) said today.

"We must determine, once and for all, the plugging questions of guilt or innocence, satisfying ourselves and our citizens that such a determination has been just and lawful," Gilman said in a letter to House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino (D-N.J.).

Gilman pointed out that about 40 impeachment resolutions have been filed in the House of Representatives and $1 million has been voted for the Judiciary panel to conduct a study to find out if there are any grounds for removal of the President.

"My congressional office has received over 3,000 letters, telegrams and phone calls from citizens concerned about the impeachment of the President. While some of these individuals voiced support and some were in opposition to impeachment proceedings, most called for an immediate inquiry into impeachment proceedings to 'clear the air,'" Gilman said.

Raise Farm Disaster Loans

WASHINGTON, D.C. farmers of my district suffered to obtain only short-term loans, virtually a total loss as a result. The $300,000 indebtedness limit of Hurricane Agnes in June, barred long-term refinancing of 1972. Most of them were able debts in several cases."

Currently, farmers may not obtain loans to repair or replace property damaged in a natural disaster if those loans put him in debt for more than $300,000. "Such a severe limitation restricts the farmer's ability to cope with major disasters," Gilman said, "because often the value of the property damaged or destroyed far exceeds $300,000."

Gilman's bill would raise the indebtedness limit to $1 million, which Gilman described as "a more realistic limitation."

In support of his bill, Gilman noted that "the vegetable Building, New City."

Ski Instructor Dies
In Snow Avalanche

ALTA, Utah (UPI) — Heavy new snow broke loose and thundered down three ski slopes in the Wasatch National Forest during the weekend, smashing into a crowded lodge, burying cars and killing a 30-year-old ski instructor.

Two avalanches occurred Sunday at the Alta Ski Resort during a blizzard. The first slide hit the Alta Lodge, seriously injuring a resort handyman.

The snow rumbled down the Flagstaff slide area and poured through the window of one room at the lodge, covering a young woman who was sleeping. She escaped unharmed. The slide also buried 20 cars and the Photohaus Studio under 10 feet of snow.

A second river of snow poured down the Cardiff slide area Sunday, narrowly missing the Peruvian Lodge and covering 15 cars in the parking lot.

On Saturday, an avalanche at Park City West, just over the mountain from Alta, roared 300 yards down a gully and slammed into three ski instructors. Two of them managed to break free of the snow pack, but Rex I. Potter, 30, Salt Lake City, was swept into a tree, knocked unconscious and suffocated before rescuers arrived. U. S. Edmund Gilligan Dies,
Noted Conservationist

KINGSTON
Former New York Herald Tribune columnist and novelist, Edmund Gilligan, 75, of Coopers Lake Road, Bearsville, died Saturday at Kingston Hospital.

As conservation editor of the Tribune and author of the famous Rod and Gun column, Gilligan fought hard to save trout streams, forests and deer herds and carried on his conservation efforts through his many novels, and in publications such as the Saturday Evening Post, Atlantic Monthly and Fortune magazine. He retired in 1961.

Gilligan, a ruddy, powerful man, was an accomplished sportsman whose 1942 novel, "The Gaunt Woman," was about a Gloucester fisherman who tracks down and exposes a Nazi U-boat supply ship on the Great Banks. The novel was later the basis of the 1951 movie "Sealed Cargo," which starred Dana Andrews.

He was an advisor to the U. S. Department on conservation of the great fisheries of the North west Atlantic. He helped draft the international treaty that controls those waters and assisted the late President John F. Kennedy in those problems and in the laws to preserve waterfowl. Born June 7, 1898 in Waltham, Mass., the son of the late John and Ellen Dillon Gilligan, he spent much of his boyhood in Gloucester. While still in his teens he got his first newspaper job on The Boston Post.

In World War I, he served as quartermaster of a submarine chaser in the North Atlantic. He was wounded in a sea battle and in honorably mentioned for bravery beyond the call of duty. It is said his war experience left him with profound admiration for for the courage of the fishermen of Gloucester.

A 1926 graduate of Harvard College, he again worked for The Boston Post as a reporter until 1930. From 1930-39 he was with the New York Sun and then with the Luce publications where he was an associate editor of Fortune Magazine from 1939 to 1942.

Typical of his novels are "White Sails Crowding," (1939), "The Ringed Horizon," (1943) and "My Earth, My Sea," (1959). Also among the more than a dozen novels he penned was "Strangers in the Vly," (1941) which described an ancient Catskill idyll.

A resident of Bearsville since 1942, he is survived by his widow, the former Nancy Rittenhouse; two sons, Stephen Gilligan of Bearsville and Edmund Gilligan of Phoenicia; two daughters, Miss Judith Gilligan, at home and Mrs. Joy Coulen-tinos of Athens, Greece; five grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters.

Funeral services will be private at the convenience of the family. Burial will be in Artists Cemetery, Woodstock. Contributions may be made to the Ulster County Heart Association.

What's in a Date?

There is no compelling reason why we observe January 1 as the beginning of a new year.

It matters not to the planet, as it makes its appointed orbital rounds, at what point the self-important little creatures who cling to its surface say that one revolution of the sun has been completed and another begun.

The ancients, in their closeness to and dependence upon the cycles of nature, were actually more sensible about this calendar business than we by marking each new year with the coming of spring and the return of life to the land, or associating it with some other important seasonal event, such as the flooding of the Nile.

It is only in relatively modern times that we have arbitrarily selected January 1 as New Year's Day. The Julian calendar, which began its year on March 25, was, in fact, used by Great Britain and its American colonies until the middle of the 18th century, long after the rest of Christendom had adopted the Gregorian or reformed calendar.

We could argue that January 1 is a logical choice because it comes shortly after the winter solstice, that point in the earth's orbit when the days slowly start growing longer in the Northern Hemisphere.

However, this is purely happenstance, and anyway, for those in the Southern Hemisphere it means just the opposite, that the nights are growing longer and that summer is ending—no particular cause for celebration.

The Freeman Will Not Publish New Year's Day

TEACHER UNION SQUALL—The executive council of the American Federation of Teachers asked its president, David Selden, to quit eight months ahead of the end of his term to let Albert Shanker, president of the New York union, serve out the term. Refusing to make way to Shanker's "thirst for power," Selden called him a menace to the 400,000 members. The squall is a struggle for power in the union.

WASHINGTON HOME RULE—The nation's capital will have home rule for the first time in over a century, under a bill before President Nixon to give residents of the District of Columbia the right to elect their own city government. Congress retains power over the budget.

COMET CHASE BEGUN—Skylab 3 astronauts have begun a 3-week study of the comet Kohoutek. They are pointing a powerful set of telescopes on the deep space traveler and plan two space walk observations. They should bring back the clearest account of the phenomena.

MOSCOW POST CONFIRMED—The United States embassy in Moscow, long vacant, has been filled by the appointment of Walter J. Stoessel Jr., a career diplomat, as ambassador to the Soviet Union. Stoessel is a fluent Russian linguist who has served in lower positions in Moscow before. He is a fine choice.

"Here's an interesting coincidence — one's the Dow-Jones averages and the other is your credibility!"

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The 12 months of 1973 will be remembered as the year that America's incurable optimism was cured.

Up to now, Americans have assumed that our future was limitless, that beyond each frontier lay greener valleys, that our abundance had no end.

In recent years, some untoward pricks of fortune have let some of the helium out of our national balloon, but it remained for the staggering shocks of 1973 to all but flatten it out.

Who could have expected on January 20, 1973, when President Nixon and Vice President Agnew took the oaths of office after their overwhelming electoral victory, that by year's end Nixon would be on the verge of impeachment, supported by only a third of the people, and Agnew would be a convicted felon who had vanished into the status of a non-person?

Can't Do
The Can Do nation was in 1973 more and more dominated by a chorus of Can't Do's from its political and business leaders. Can't stop inflation. Can't hold down government spending. Can't break the Arab oil embargo. Can't develop by 1975 antipollution devices that foreign manufacturers have already developed. Can't meet foreign competition. Can't keep the railroads running without massive government bailouts. And so on.

For the first time, Americans have begun to look backward. There is growing apprehension that we have reached the end of a golden age. Nostalgia is everywhere on the rise.

This is reflected in our popular entertainment. Cults have formed around movies of the '30s and '40s, and fan clubs are devoted to deceased movie stars like Humphrey Bogart.

A yearning is displayed among many college youths, not for the challenge of adulthood, but for the security of infancy. Buffalo Bob, host of the 1950s kids' show "Howdy Doodie," was resurrected and toured campuses to rousing receptions. His audiences of 200-pound sophomores would sing again their baby songs and often dissolve into tears.

New Maturity

Yet, for all the dizzying reverses of 1973, there was no panic among our people and no collapse of our institutions. A new maturity seems to be surfacing as more and more Americans realize there are no lasting heroes and no simple solutions.

The forbearance of the public in the face of the Watergate mess — its insistence on being fair to President Nixon at the same time demanding that the truth must come out and crimes must be punished — has been remarkable.

While the government founders, the people have gone about their business. As a survey by one of our national magazines reported: "There is a strong feeling that it's up to the American people to bail the country out of its difficulties because the leadership in government can't do it."

Also, 1973 was a good year for employment, with 85 million at work, the most in our history. The acrimony between rednecks and longhairs, hard hats and students, has mellowed into live-and-let-live. The more exotic revolutionaries have all but disappeared, by mutual consent, for their rights have been vindicated time and again in our courts.

Racial Progress

Racial strife has quietly declined. Solid gains have been made by blacks, as symbolized by the election this year of black mayors in such populous cities as Los Angeles, Detroit and Atlanta. Campus turmoil has abated; complaints of student apathy begin to be heard again. Yet energetic, idealistic youths are enlisting by the thousands in practical public service groups, doing everything from investigating their state legislature to providing free services for the indigent.

It was feared that labor, pinched by inflation and emboldened by the paralysis of the Nixon Administration, would wreck the economy either through intransigent strikes or inflationary wage demands. Neither happened. What 1973 adds up to for America, I suppose, is that Uncle Sam found out that he is not ageless, shining and invincible. He is a paunchy fellow, unexpectedly overtaken by middle age. Some of his favorite certitudes have been exploded. Some of the dreams of youth, he sees now, will never be achieved. Others, upon realization, have turned to ashes.

Aches and Pains

People he counted on have let him down. Success has made him try less hard and he has become a bit sloppy. After exertion, he feels mysterious aches and pains. He sees that this once measureless strength now has its limits. Suddenly he knows that he is mortal, vulnerable and the shadow crosses his mind that he will not always win.

But he is still strong as a bull, still ahead of the field, still walrus-tough.

Two sets of alternatives lie ahead of him, as of us all. Decline can result in a search either for scapegoats or self-knowledge. The collapse of illusions can bring either panic or maturity. The fall of idols either demoralization or resilience. Defeat can bring on a retreat into destructive egocentrism or a quest for a wider and truer commonality.

My bet is that Uncle Sam's greatest years lie ahead.

The Mills Era Ends

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although a completely recuperated Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas resumes full-time chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee in January, his once majestic authority has dwindled close to mortal dimensions—with scant chance for recovery.

With Mills convalescing since mid-August following back surgery, the revolution now leveling authority in Congress has caught up with the Ways and Means Committee and its awesomely prestigious chairman. Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon, acting chairman in Mills's absence, instituted democratic procedures to give individual members a voice in policy decisions.

Thus, the 25-member committee, intensely loyal to Mills for so long, is now overwhelmingly opposed to restoring his authority.

Given their taste of freedom, committee members will not relinquish it—though many concede the efficiency of the most important committee in Congress has been badly eroded by the new leveling. Mills, last of the postwar congressional giants, has had his chairmanship cut down to size. The Mills era, with the legislative master from Kensett, Ark., controlling key domestic legislation for more than a decade, is over.

Besides his legendary legislative craftsmanship and political astuteness, Mills' unique power derived from absolute control over the committee. In 1958, his second year as chairman, he abolished subcommittees to gain that control. During the past four months, Ullman has restored them in embryonic form as "task forces." This dispersal of power is so popular among members that they would fight Mills to retain it.

Through "task forces" and other reforms, Ullman has ingratiated himself with committee members. When the Senate turned the Social Security bill into a "Christmas tree" loaded down with costly goodies, Ullman formally consulted his committee on what to do. In contrast, Mills would have informally consulted Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Ullman's course guaranteed delay in passing the bill. Moreover, his tendency to compromise on every point diluted the foreign trade bill. Joining the rest of Congress, the Ways and Means Committee has become a markedly less efficient instrument as a result of reform. Nevertheless, even committee members who recognize this naturally prefer Ullman's permissive reforms to Mills's austere authority.

That's why Mills would face heavy going in any showdown over reform with Ullman, a showdown possibly presaged by cooling relations between them. Some committee members say Mills was not happy with an article in Dun's Review, containing lavish praise of Ullman by committee members. For his part, Ullman grumbled to members when Mills was issuing statements to the press about the trade bill from his Little Rock hospital bed while Ullman was grappling with the bill in committee.

Thus, Mills can no longer count on unquestioning committee support. For years, Ullman himself was a loyal Mills lieutenant. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, once a Mills stalwart, enjoys the new freedom. Republican members confide they will not tolerate the old intimate working relationship between Mills and Rep. Herman Schneebeli of Pennsylvania, the committee's senior Republican.

Even if Mills had not missed four months because of illness, erosion of his power seemed inevitable. House reforms now require open committee meetings and fewer restrictions on floor amendments to Ways and Means bills, undercutting the chairman's authority.

Moreover, the committee is facing two additional challenges to its primacy. The recommendations of a select committee headed by Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, long a rival and critic of Mills, would strip away much (health, welfare, foreign trade) of the vast Ways and Means jurisdiction and limit it largely to tax legislation. Simultaneously, a newly liberal Senate Finance Committee, headed by a newly aggressive Chairman Long, is serving notice it demands equal status with Ways and Means.

Finally, Mills has not fully recovered from the decline in his prestige suffered last year when, obviously bored with minutia of legislation, he ran for President.

To some committee members, he has never quite regained the Olympian heights. Old Mills-watchers believe the chairman in bygone years never would have been a principal sponsor of an amendment to the trade bill denying trade equality to the Soviet Union because of the Jewish emigration question. Rep. Barber Conable of New York, an outspoken Republican member of the committee, criticized Mills for acting "mischievously" on this question.

"I assume Wilbur is going to come on like gangbusters to try to get his power back," said one committee member, predicting the effort will fail. But most Congressmen feel Mills, still expert in sensing the mood of the House, will accept the inevitable. If that portends Ways and Means will become just another committee and Wilbur Mills just another chairman, then 1974 could become the final year of one of the greatest legislative careers in history.

A Change of Pace Columnist

This is not a pretty Christmas card, but it is mine. A Merry Christmas to you, dear reader. Though belatedly, May the New Year bring contentment to you and to those you love. Most of all, I hope that each of us learns to make peace with himself.

For 17 years, many of you have been more faithful to me than I to you. This is not a modest statement; it is one more attempt at accuracy. Over the years, some of the stories have been good; many are weak and opinionated; some, on rereading, have fallen far below the high standards I set for myself.

Our relationship has been intimate. The most popular columns, if I may judge by your letters, have been the ones which deal with the family. Columns about the picaresque of my father, Big John; the growing of Karen and Kathleen; the abysmal marriage of Gayle and her ultimate triumph as assistant to that meticulous perfectionist, Dr. Jack Mickley, in autopsies; Virginia Lee's never-ending love affair with her husband Charles, and the eight innocents who listen to the barked commands and feel that they are living at West Point.

These have elicited your most favorable response. And yet I have been conscious that they constitute low-key trivia. I am your change-of-pace columnist. Others deal with world problems, news analysis, muckraking, prophetic pontification and the political wars.

Here you are brought to earth with a bump. I search the human face for truth. It is a world of laughter and tears and harsh reality. My habit is not to write words, but to paint them. Most of the stories have a timeless quality so that an editor, pressed for space, can spike my material until tomorrow, and then forget it.

I chose this path. In early 1956, William Randolph Hearst, Jr. asked a question. He knew that I spent my time writing books. "You wouldn't want to write a column, would you?" The question reads backwards. I gave it a lot of meditation, about 10 seconds. "Sure," I said, "if I can do no more than three a week and have time for the books." I signed a contract with King Features Syndicate and this is where you and I met—over a gabby typewriter.

If you know any newspaper reporters, they will tell you that this constitutes a career in reverse. A man does not begin as a rewrite man on New York papers, as I did, work up to editing magazines such as Collier's and Liberty, go on to writing books, and then return to work for newspapers.

The reason for the 180 degree turn is love. The cornball editors call it "printer's ink in the blood," but it is more than that. On a newspaper, no day is like any other. The excitement is perpetual. The unexpected news flash is well named—it is lightning.

My meeting with you was a homecoming, more joyous for me than for you. Books are tedious symphonies. They require years of research and endless writing. A sentiment such as this tardy Christmas card comes to 900 words—give or take a few—and a couple of hundred make-up editors try to shoehorn it into place in a two-column, 8-point grave.

To find out if a column is worth writing, I ask myself a solitary question: If you were writing it, would I want to read it. When the answer is yes, I sit at a blank sheet of paper and stare at a knotty pine wall. I never begin until I can see the characters, hear them speak, and have a fair notion of the opening, the middle, and the end of the story.

A sinner with mercy and imagination can do it. The overly pious, the vindictive, the callous seldom make the grade. A compassion for weakness in others helps the writer to understand himself. The man to fear is the young reporter whose talent is ingraind suspicion. In his new facility with words, he comes on strong with the crusher. Too late he learns that the perjorative is a drug which demands harsher words to achieve the same impact.

It relegates this column to the old-fashioned garbage heap. In the days when I covered Sing Sing, I was obsessed with the notion that I had to find a virtue in murderers about to die. It isn't much to say the S.O.B. was known to feed stray dogs. It is something.

And so, dear reader, my best wishes go to you. Christmas is more than a tree, lights and a turkey. On this day a Child was born. It isn't necessary to be maudlin about it. Spend a moment to dwell on it. One can find warmth in the darkest ghetto. There is none in an empty stable.

Merry Christmas . . . Belatedly.

Fun-as-Usual Outlook Despite Energy Crisis

World Sets for New Year Revelry

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
From Times Square to Trafalgar Square, from fireworks-blazing Honolulu to horn-blowing Paris, the world prepares to bring in the New Year with traditional revelry.

Although many celebrations were expected to be subdued by worldwide inflation and shortages of fuel, the outlook in many of the world's capitals was for New Year's Eve fun-as-usual.

In New York's Times Square, where the brightest lights have been dimmed for weeks to save energy, they will blaze briefly again for the crowds of celebrants that traditionally gather there.

Londoners were expected to pour into Trafalgar Square for the traditional plunge into the fountain under Nelson's column. Hotels and restaurants in the browned-out city were forecasting big crowds.

In Honolulu, revelers planned to shoot off thousands of firecrackers as the New Year dawned.

Police in East Berlin banned the traditional fireworks for New Year's Eve. East German officials further dampened holiday plans by refusing to extend visitors' passes through the wall from West to East Berlin beyond midnight. Those who planned to remain overnight in East Berlin with relatives and friends were faced with payments of up to 20 marks for the extra day's stay.

In New Orleans, crowds began gathering over the weekend for what has been billed as the world's largest New Year's Eve party — a nighttime contest in Tulane University's Sugar Bowl between Notre Dame and Alabama. Officials said they expected the previous attendance record of slightly under 85,000 would be broken.

In Los Angeles, where football and roses are the traditional themes for New Year's Day, nighttime carousing was expected to be somewhat inhibited by an ongoing police crackdown on drunken driving.

An official said the fuel crisis might cut down the crowds for the Tournament of Roses parade and Rose Bowl game in Pasadena, but crowds were already assembling.

A military observance was planned in Buenos Aires, where Argentine President Juan Peron was to preside over ceremonies honoring newly promoted generals, admirals and brigadiers.

In Chicago, planned celebrations ranged from a $35 dinner and dance at the Pump Room of the Ambassador East to a New Year's Eve rally by the Young Socialist Alliance, holding its national convention in the Windy City. Wind or no, crowds were expected to mass in the streets, food and the Loop to usher in the New Year with shouts and horn-blowing.

Cleveland's Mayor Ralph Perk, trying to outdo Times Square, ordered a special dime fare to bring celebrants by rapid transit to the Ohio city's Public Square for a New Year's bash with bands, singers, dancing in the streets, food and prizes.

Oil Tanker Lineup Probed

By The Associated Press

State and federal investigations have been launched into reports that oil tankers were lined up along the East Coast, in some cases delaying unloading of their cargoes until the price was right.

New York State Atty. Gen. Louis Lefkowitz said Sunday his office has started a probe and officials in three other East Coast states said they were exploring the situation.

An administration spokesman said the Federal Energy Office was also looking into the reports.

"I don't think there's much to it," the spokesman said.

Port officials in Boston, Philadelphia, New Haven and New York said Sunday they had no evidence that unusual numbers of tankers were backed up.

In New York, Lefkowitz said, "We want to know whether the tankers are independent or owned by the oil companies and why they're delaying."

He said it was part of a "general investigation conducted by my office for the past six months as to whether this energy shortage is contrived or real."

He said he had no specific evidence yet of any tanker jam-up in the Port of New York.

In Pennsylvania, Gov. Milton

J. Shapp said Sunday his office probed reports of tankers being backed up in Delaware Bay.

"We found the problem is that we're not suffering from a shortage of crude oil but a lack of capacity for refining it," he said. "It makes one wonder why oil companies can claim to have a shortage and raise prices. The industry just seems to be using it as a device to step up its profits."

In November, the state received figures from the U.S. Department of Transportation showing the crude oil stock was running slightly ahead of last year, he said.

Oil company spokesmen in Philadelphia confirmed the increase.

"It's not that we're not making less (oil); it's that we're not making enough anymore," one oil company official said.

Last week, New Jersey Gov.-elect Brendan T. Byrne called for investigations to determine if "tankers were out there waiting for their price."

On Dec. 26, Connecticut Gov. Thomas J. Meskill called for a probe of "persistent rumors" about tankers lying off New Haven Harbor were unable or unwilling to pump their cargo ashore.

Lindsay Walks Streets In Final Days as Mayor

NEW YORK (UPI) — John V. Lindsay spent the last Sunday of his administration doing what helped make him a national figure soon after taking office eight years ago: walking along streets filled with boisterous New Yorkers. But instead of the sweltering and tense ghettos of 1966, Lindsay was mobbed by thousands of well-wishers along the Fifth Avenue mall—23 blocks closed to vehicular traffic. Lindsay, who switched parties and ran an unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic nomination for president, did not seek re-election as mayor.

Abraham Beame, 67, the city's Democratic comptroller, will be sworn in as the city's 104th mayor on New Year's Day.

Asked if he would miss the crowds, the enthusiasm and the recognition, Lindsay said, "it's mixed. Of course I'll miss it but it's mixed."

Those too far to shake Lindsay's hand, called out their well-wishes: "Hate to see you go John!" "Good luck Mr. Mayor!" "God bless you Mayor Lindsay." "Come back to us soon."

To which Lindsay would reply with a broad smile, "Happy New Year and good health to you, friend." To the many little girls almost trampled trying to get close, Lindsay would say, "How are you honey?" and to the little boys, "Hello hand-some."

Many asked Lindsay if he was going to run for senator, governor or President. "No, I don't think so," he replied.

At one point a man told Lindsay the mall "is a great idea—we need it seven days a week." Lindsay replied quietly, "you know, you're right."

Once seated in his car with several aides after the 40-minute walk, Lindsay said somewhat wistfully, "what a way to go."

State Court Benches Judge; Previous Convictions Cited

NEW YORK (UPI) — The state's Court on the Judiciary has voted unanimously to remove a State Supreme Court justice from the bench.

The special court voted Saturday to remove Joseph P. Pfingst of Babylon, on Long Island, from office. The court cited his conviction on three counts of a nine-count indictment charging him with conspiracy to conceal assets in a bankruptcy case.

The indictment stemmed from a case occurring while before Pfingst's election to the Supreme Court in 1968, while he was still a private attorney.

The panel was composed of retiring Chief Judge Stanley H. Fuld of the Court of Appeals, senior Appeals Court Associate Judge Adrian P. Burke, who is also retiring, and one representative from each of the four Appellate Divisions.

The panel, which had heard arguments in July and September from Pfingst, rejected his attorneys' contention that because his conviction did not occur while he was sitting on the bench he should not be removed.

"To allow a judge convicted of a crime of moral turpitude to continue in office would foster public distrust of the whole judicial process," the panel said.

"The crimes of which respondent was convicted constitute cause" for removal, the decision said, "even though they were committed before respondent had become a judge. Not only did they involve moral turpitude, but... they constituted serious felonies under federal law."

Pfingst, who is appealing his federal convictions, was suspended by the state panel in April.

In the federal convictions, stemming from a bankruptcy case involving the William Evans Dairy Co. Inc., Pfingst was sentenced to three-year prison terms on each of three counts. All but four months of the sentences were later suspended, and the sentences were ordered to run concurrently.

Two Inmates Overstay Furlough From Attica

ATTICA, N.Y. (UPI) — Two Attica State Correctional Facility inmates have failed to return to the prison on time after a seven-day Christmas furlough, prison officials said Sunday night.

An official said the two were among 75 inmates that received the holiday leaves. A third inmate died of an overdose of methadone in New York City on Christmas Eve, he said.

Capt. Robert Curtiss declined to disclose the identities of the two men missing or the methadone victim. He did say the two missing men were among 38 inmates that went to New York City for the holidays.

Curtiss, a duty officer at the prison, said arrest warrants had been issued for the two, but added they might return on their own.

Curtiss said they could have been held up by transportation difficulties.

"It's quite possible they will show up," he said. "It's happened before."

"We've had over 300 men out on furloughs this year and with the two missing so far only a total of four men have failed to report on time," Curtiss said.

The inmates on leaves are normally given five hours grace after their return deadline, but the period may be extended if there are extenuating circumstances, he said.

The furloughs are given to those inmates with one year or less remaining in their sentences.

Scotland Yard Is Mum On Shooting of Zionist

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard refused to say today whether it believed the shooting of one of Britain's leading Zionists was the work of a Palestinian terrorist.

But a spokesman said robbery had been ruled out as the motive.

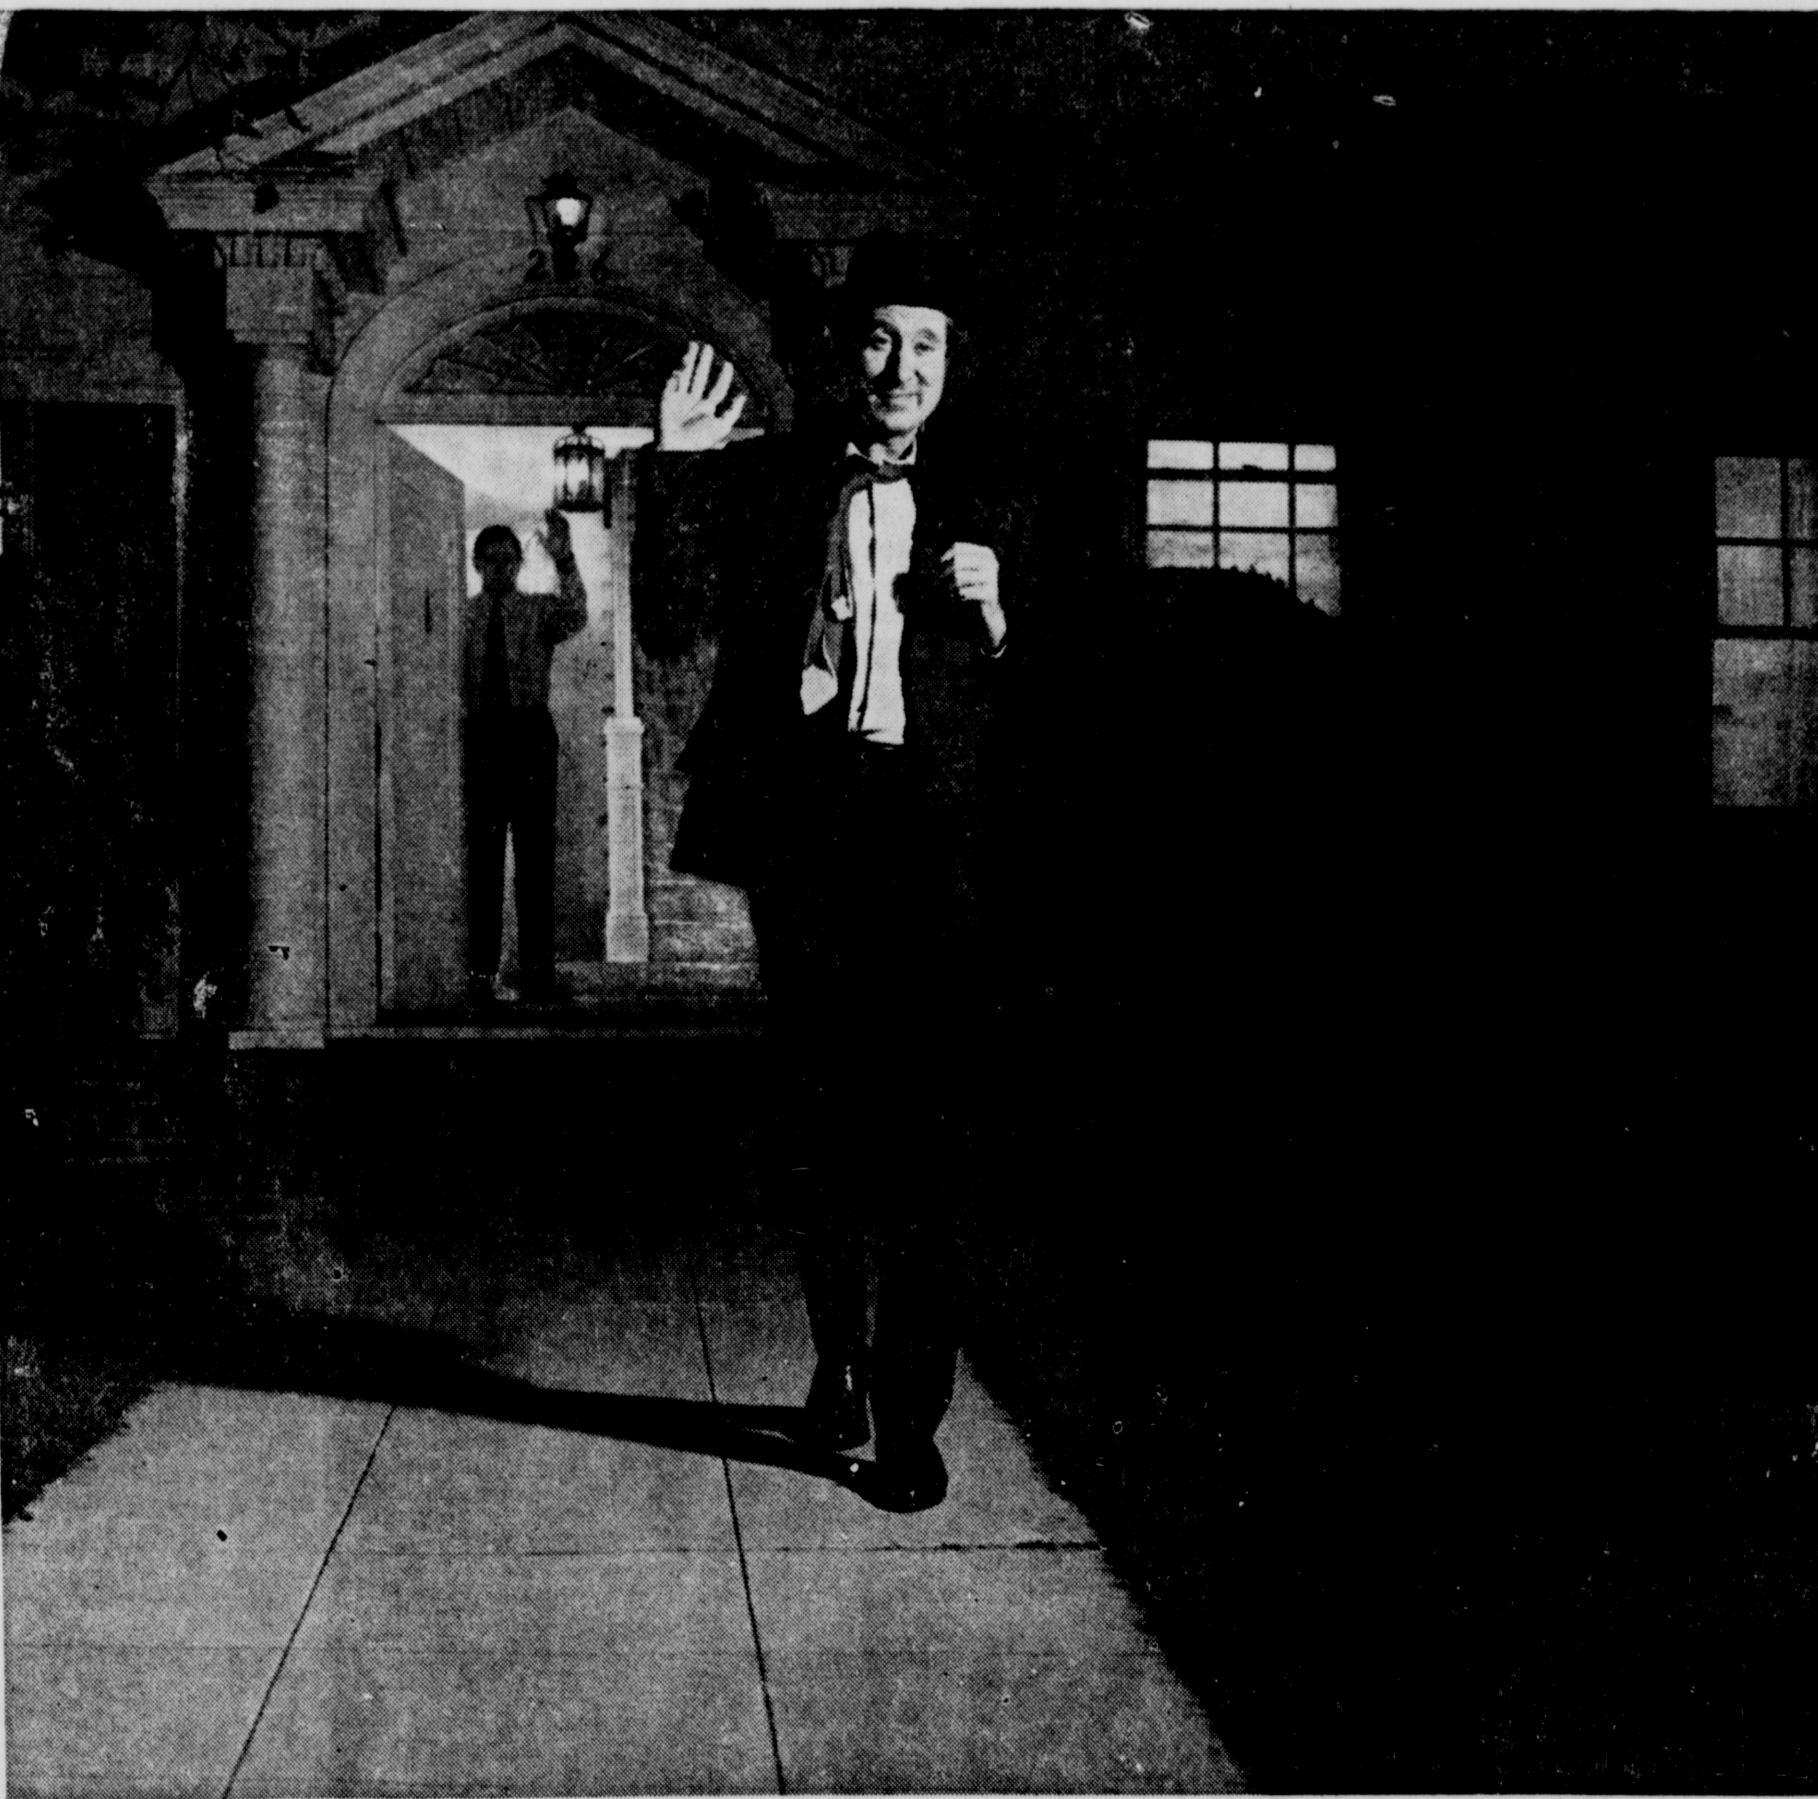

Joseph Edward Sieff, 68-year-old president of the Marks and Spencer chain of clothing and food stores, was reported in serious condition in London's Middlesex Hospital. Surgeons removed a bullet from his head following the shooting Sunday night.

An unidentified man rang the bell at Sieff's 30-room London mansion about 7 p.m. Sunday, pulled a gun on the Portuguese butler and made him take him to Sieff. The gunman shot Sieff in the mouth, then ran from the house and escaped.

Sieff's wife and two other servants were in the house at the time.

Sieff has raised millions in financial aid for Israel. He was chairman of the Joint Palestine Appeal from 1961 to 1965 and then became its president.

For he was a jolly good fellow.

A few drinks never stopped him before.

Maybe they never stopped you, either. But no matter how sober you feel, three or four drinks during the hour before getting behind the wheel increase your chances of having an accident by seven times. Six drinks, and you're ten times more likely to have one. And no amount of coffee changes these odds.

Every holiday season, traffic accidents increase by 25%. And jolly good fellows are the major reason. So if you've had a few drinks, let a friend drive you home. Or take a taxi.

Have You Just Become Engaged?

According to U.S. Government statistics, the number of marriages has increased every year for the past 14 years. And, according to the number of telephone calls being received by the Women's Department at The Freeman, the holiday season is a popular time for couples to become engaged.

As a guide to those planning to announce engagements in the paper, here is a list of the information required.

Notices should include names, addresses, parents of the bride-elect and her fiancé, as well as the schools attended, places of employment, and date of the wedding.

Notices must be signed by parents or guardian and must include a telephone number where the party may be reached during the day for verification.

Snapshots, polaroid, color photographs are not acceptable. Black and white wallet-size pictures are advised.

To answer questions concerning gift-giving at engagement parties, we have a quote from Emily Post's book, "Etiquette," which explains the proper procedure.

"Presents are rarely taken to an engagement party, even though it is not a surprise, because usually only intimate friends or relatives give gifts, and other guests might be embarrassed. Should some friends arrive with gifts, the bride should open them in private with only the donor present, rather than make a display of them in front of those who did not bring anything."

Chairman Named for Annual Kingston Hospital Dance

MRS. CHRISTUS J. LARIOS

Mrs. Norman Schwakopf, president of the Auxiliary of the Kingston Hospital, has announced that Mrs. Christus J. Larios has been named chairman of the annual hospital dance. This year's gala will be held Saturday evening, Feb. 2 at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Mrs. Larios has been an active member of the Kingston Hospital Auxiliary and has served as vice-president of the organization, as well as chairman of various committees. She also served as vice-president of the Hurley School Parents Club and as vice-president of the executive committee of the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School. A past president of the Hellenic Women's Club of St. George Church, she was a representative to the Heart Association of Ulster County and has worked on numerous fund raising drives for the Heart Association and the American Cancer Society. She is now serving on the Junior Assembly Committee and is a sustaining member of the Junior League of Kingston.

Mrs. Larios views her assignment as dance chairman with enthusiasm and optimism. "During the past years, the annual dance has been one of the highlights of the community's social calendar. I know that the community will continue in its overwhelming support of this project and that the evening will be an outstanding success". All proceeds will benefit the Auxiliary's pledge to the cardio-vascular diagnostic laboratory of the Kingston Hospital.

'Ageless Aging'

Scientific Breakthroughs Extend Healthy Years

By ALISON GODDARD

Short Hills, N. J. (MW) — Forget about finding the formula for a magic elixir and cancel all expeditions in search of the Fountain of Youth — we already know how to extend our productive years.

"We're getting younger and younger all the time," reports science writer Ruth Winter. The author of "Ageless Aging" says researchers are on the brink of discovering how to retard and perhaps even prevent — the aging process; there is enough information available from their data now to at least slow it down.

"For example, they've found having too high a blood pressure can really damage our intellect," she relates. "Maintaining normal blood pressure can be done easily through proper medical care." Diet and exercise also play an important role in keeping us young in mind and body. "In Germany they found that overweight people got diseases ten years earlier than they usually would have," Miss Winter volunteers, "and there's a clear evidence that exercise improves circulation and muscle tone, and brings more oxygen to the brain."

The Hormone Factor

Women have the jump on men in the aging game. "They're put together better than men, right from the beginning," asserts the writer. "Boy babies are miscarried more often than girls, and three times as many males die at birth or in the first year." Then there's "the hormone factor," although the experts aren't sure whether it's the female hormone that protects, or the male hormone that's destructive. But Miss Winter says studies show that replacing female hormones after menopause "helps protect the bones, and although it's not a youth pill, it also helps keep tissues firm."

Calling replacement "the wave of the future," she explains "someday we'll be able to compute what we had at age 25, so that as we age and begin to lose that ingredient — whatever it is — we will be able to replace it just like estrogen is today."

"Ageless Aging" (Crown Publishers, Inc.) is the latest of several books of popular science written by this attractive, energetic brunette. She also pens a nationally syndicated column for her suburban home, shared with her neurosurgeon husband. What impressed her most of all the findings? "The mental thing" — a study at Duke University's Gerontology Center which confirms the importance of keeping minds involved and active.

Mind Over Matter

"This study tried to predict how long a person would live, considering his physical condition, his job, his lifestyle and life insurance actuarial tables," she reports. "They predicted one elderly man would only live another eight years. But he so enjoyed what he was doing, he lived another 15. It was his interest in life and will to go on."

Duke University is also working with a new drug that improves failing memory; it may prove helpful in treating retarded children. And there are new breakthroughs every day. "Since my book came out they've found out more about 'T' cells and 'B' cells, which are supposed to work together and protect you against disease. But when they go out of balance, you sort of self-destruct." The key to unlocking all secrets of aging rests with our simplest, most basic unit — the cell.

"Once scientists understand the components of a cell and what mechanism controls it — they'll understand what aging is." And, Ruth Winter adds, "they're a lot closer than we think!"

Doing the Right Thing

By ELIZABETH L. POST

© 1973, Emily Post Institute, Inc.

Dear Mrs. Post: Our house is set about 50 feet from the road. When our visitors leave, should we walk out to their car with them and stand there until they drive off? What should THEY do — talk some more or drive off on one? Should we wait for them to drive away before going into the house?

Caroline

Dear Caroline: If the weather is good, walk to the car with your visitors and stay there until they drive away. If it is rainy or cold, say "good-bye" at the door. If it is not too cold, leave the door open until they reach their car, then wave and close the door.

The visitor, whatever you do, gets in and drives off immediately.

Dear Mrs. Post: My daughter and I are addressing the invitations to her wedding.

Some of the people being invited have three or four children in the family. I know that "and Family" on the envelope is not considered good taste, but what can one do? Must we send each child a separate invitation? I tried listing their names below the parents, and it looked ridiculous.

Ellen O'Connor

Dear Mrs. O'Connor: Today we are so much more practical, and we also have so much less time to give to the "amenities," that "and Family" is no longer considered in poor taste. Unless you do have the time — and the money — to send individual invitations, it is the practical solution. DO send separate ones to those who are in the wedding party, to married children, or to children not living under the same roof. And if you are using inner envelopes, DO write on them the first names of the children in the family below those of their parents.

After a Fashion

Designer Heather Cohane Is Knitting Pretty, Now

By MARIAN CHRISTY
Irish-based designer Heather Cohane was in one of those crucial dithers that was quickly turning lemonade into a lemon.

She and her second husband, author John Cohane, were about to embark on an extended trip around the world when Heather's mother, an Aunt Mame type who admits to no age beyond 39, decided that the Cohane babies — then aged one and two — would be too much to handle. "I'm too old," she wailed uncharacteristically before her exit.

Babysitter Heather, a merry Englishwoman with a dash of shorn red hair and traditional peaches-and-cream skin, decided to turn the lemon back into lemonade of a different flavor.

"I hurriedly unfixed the four and on the same day convinced my husband that we should live in Italy for a while. It was something I'd always wanted to do."

Within a few months the Cohane family was happily settled in a chilly Roman palazzo and Heather was interviewing Italian women for the position of governess. Eventually the number of applicants was reduced to one. Charming young woman whose credentials were more in the direction of fashion than nanny.

In a clipped British accent Heather recapitulates the final interview:

"She emphasized that her normal job was as a knitter — so I told her she could knit me lots of heavy sweaters during her spare hours. She thought that was wonderful. So did I. She joined the family." Heather was surprised, however, that the governess never clicked those needles.

One Christmas holiday the governess was invited to sit at the family dinner table along with a slew of new Italian friends including a friendly knitwear manufacturer who talked long and low to the governess. Heather thought a lovely romance was brewing but:

"The governess told me we were getting a machine in the house. What kind, I inquired? After telling me how silly I was, she said it was a knitting machine, of course! I wished her a merry Christmas, told her the borrowed machine sounded fascinating and forgot the whole bloody thing," says Heather.

By the time spring rolled around, the governess and Heather were co-designing a collection of knit polo dresses with coordinated coats and jackets. "It was terribly exciting to discover the untapped ability to make pretty clothes," says Heather who was born in London and raised in Paris.

Oddly she was never trained in fashion and cannot sketch or make a pattern: "I went to a rather hazardous Swiss finishing school where the headmaster beat his wife regularly and even got one of the girls in my class pregnant," she says between giggles.

When the Cohanes finally moved back to a sprawling Georgian estate in County Limerick, Ireland, the Italian governess came with them — but she and Heather were being watched by Irish nannies. The unexpectedly, Heather's husband was scheduled to meet with his book publisher in New York. Heather saw opportunity knocking.

On a dare, Cohane took a small collection of knits with him to show a Fifth Ave. store buyer who immediately gave him a $10,000 order and asked fashion questions which the author drolly parlayed with a few well-timed bluffs.

Heather says: "The buyer asked the style number of the polo dress. My husband quipped 'Number One.' She asked what sizes? He replied 'small-medium-large'. She asked the proper name of the collection. He retorted 'Holly Park' because they were made at home and that's the name of our estate."

When Cohane returned to Limerick with the order, his wife fainted. When she came to, she hopped into her blue Audi with the giant-size Donald Duck decals on each door, and drove around the countryside hiring the farmer's wives as knitters. Today, six years later, her knits are in 85 prestigious American stores — including Bonwit Teller. The annual sales volume is a million-dollars-plus. There are 45 on her staff.

"What clinched the first sale was the fact that Jackie Onassis popped into the store and bought two polo dresses," says Heather whose v.i.p. client list runs the gamut from theatre people like Elizabeth Taylor to socialites like Mrs. David Bruce, wife of the American Ambassador to China.

Heather, who's born under the astrological sign of Gemini, describes herself as having a dual and contradictory personality. "I love delusions of grandeur but, if necessary, I can live on nothing." Since her success in fashion, Heather has redesigned the 1780 manor memorably.

There's yellow wall-to-wall everywhere. An antique copper bathtub — with plumbing that works efficiently — sits in front of the fireplace in her yellow-orange bedroom which is lit by dozens of candles rather than electric light.

One room is an Oriental tent with a pointed shelter hooked to the ceiling and made from dress lining scraps. There are 35 donkeys in a barn and lots of pigeons caged in the old kitchen.

Heather has been schooled to the unusual from girlhood. When she was 5, her father deserted. Her mother took Heather to live in Monte Carlo — where there was excitement.

"My mother's admirers considered me their mascot," says Heather, who spent her early evenings in casinos. "I knew the stakes were very high and that the room reeked of drama," she says in retrospect. "But what really mesmerized me were the glamorous clothes that the women wore."

That, of course, was Phase One of Heather Cohane's fashion career. (Distributed by UNITED Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Abby Says: Better Keep Dreams to Yourself, Pal!

DEAR ABBY: I have been happily married to a beautiful girl for over a year. She used to work at the same office with me, but she quit a few months ago.

There is this guy at the office who has been telling me every morning lately about his love dreams. And who do you think he's been dreaming about? MY wife!

I know you can't blame a guy for what he dreams, but it bugs me to know that he

I hate to get rough with him because he doesn't know how much it bugs me, but how do I tell him?

you that strikes me as 9 simple common sense rules. Let's call them, New Year's Resolutions:

"Just for today I will try to live thru this day only, and not tackle my whole life problem at once. I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

"Just for today I will be happy. This assumes to be true what Abraham Lincoln said, that 'Most folks are as happy as they make up their minds to be.'

"Just for today I will adjust myself to what is, and not try to adjust everything to my own desires. I will take my 'luck' as it comes, and fit myself to it.

"Just for today I will exercise my soul in three ways: I will do somebody a good turn, and not get found out; if anybody knows of it, it will not count. I will do at least two things I don't want to do — just for exercise. I will not show anyone that my feelings are hurt; they may be hurt, but today I will not show it.

"Just for today I will be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk low, act courteously, criticize not one bit, not find fault with anything and not try to improve or regulate anybody except myself.

"Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it. I will save myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

"Just for today I will have a quiet half hour all by myself, and relax. During this half hour, some time, I will try to get a better perspective of my life.

"Just for today I will be unafraid. Especially I will not be afraid to enjoy what is beautiful, and to believe that as I give to the world, so the world will give to me."

Folk Music Program on Saturday

Sandy and Caroline Paton, well-known folk singers and collectors of folk music, will be featured performers at the Coffee House which will be presented at the Jewish Community Center, a United Way Agency, 110 S. Grand Avenue, Poughkeepsie, on Saturday, January 5, at 8:30 p.m. The Patons have traveled in search of folk songs and ballads all over the United States, Canada, and the British Isles. Behind almost every song they sing there is a fascinating story of how, from whom, and where the song was discovered. Their music is gentle and the style informal. The concerns of people, their aspirations, their anxieties, their joys, and their sorrows are expressed in the songs which Sandy and Caroline have either created or preserved.

The Patons have presented concerts throughout the country. In a review of a recent concert, Tim Motton of the "Virginia Pilot" wrote, "Their performance, quiet and intimate and lively, made the night-out a friendly occasion, like gathering around with relatives and friends in the living room at home." Sandy Paton accompanies their performance on the guitar.

Also appearing that evening will be Wendy Schwartz, who serves as Cultural Arts Coordinator at the Center, and who is a professional folk singer. Wendy will be joined by Yaffa Haimovitch, program and Joseph Batzir, teacher at the Community Hebrew School. This part of the program will include music from Israel and the United States. The program is open to the public.

Refreshments will be served at old-fashioned prices.

OATH-TAKING — Charles Breitel is sworn in as the new chief judge of the Court of Appeals of New York State. The 64-year-old Breitel was given the oath by Associate Judge Adrian Burke. Burke is leaving the court to become corporation counsel to the New York City Mayor Elect Abraham Beame. Breitel has been on the court seven years and was elected in November to succeed Stanley Fuld. ## Mayor's Message Tops New Year at City Hall

KINGSTON Mayor Francis R. Koenig, Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo and 13 aldermen will take the oath of office for two years when the Common Council meets for its annual reorganizational meeting tomorrow at noon.

The highlight of the day's activities traditionally is the Mayor's Message, a combination review of the past year, forecast of the coming year and holiday greetings. Koenig will begin his third term in office. Gallo starts his fourth as alderman-at-large, after two terms as alderman.

Of the 13 aldermen, four are new members to the Common Council although one of them, James Howard (D-Seventh Ward), had been an alderman during the '60s, in fact, majority leader of the Common Council in 1966-67.

The other three new men include Philip DeCicco (D-Ninth Ward), Daniel Smith (D-Eighth Ward) and Henry Dreiser (D-Thirteenth Ward).

The mayor's cabinet will also be announced and no changes are expected. Koenig's department heads are appointed for two years terms with the exception of assessor and building inspector.

Alderman-at-Large Gallo will be naming Common Council

Committees and their chairmen. No changes are expected in the key committees of the Council with Alderman Donald E. Quick (D-Sixth Ward) expected back as chairman of the Council's major committee, Laws and Rules, and Alderman John E. Finch (D-Fifth Ward) expected back as chairman of the Finance, Ways and Means Committee.

Alderman Peter J. Mancuso (D-Twelfth Ward) the senior member of the Common Council having won election in 1963, was reelected majority leader of the Council on Dec. 27. Alderman Brian D. Smith (R-Third Ward) the lone Republican in the Council, returns as minority leader.

City Judge Hubert A. Richter will be sworn in for his third four-year term of office and in turn is expected to administer the oath of office to Koenig, Gallo and the 13 aldermen.

Proceedings start at noon in the Common Council Chambers, 1 Meadow Street. The mayor and Mrs. Koenig will hold open house at their 51 Fairview Avenue home from 2 to 4 p.m.

Good Side of Fuel Crisis — Highway Death Toll Down

By United Press International New Year's holiday traffic was down today, producing a lower-than-normal traffic death count.

The National Safety Council had estimated that between 470 and 570 Americans would die in traffic accidents between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Tuesday. But the fear of running out of gasoline and lower speed limits in many states apparently kept many drivers off the road, state officials said.

In Chicago, where only a few stations were opened during the weekend, the Justice Department issued a temporary restraining order against a South Side Station. McBride's Shell Service Station was charged with selling a rabbit's foot, a blank legal document and five gallons of gasoline for $10.05.

The breakdown:
Traffic 194
Fires 26
Planes 1
Others 13
Total 234
Illinois State Police say a full container of gasoline in the trunk of a car was responsible for an explosion and fire that killed four persons in southern Illinois in a two-vehicle collision Sunday night.

Texas and California led the nation in traffic deaths with 16, while Ohio reported 15.

Although most all gas stations were closed Sunday, many said they would reopen today but close again on Tuesday.

A United Press International count today showed at least 194 persons had died in traffic accidents.

Urgent Need for Blood Donors

KINGSTON Volunteers are urgently needed during January by the Ulster County Blood Bank, which is planning a countywide recruitment effort as a part of National Blood Donor Month.

Arthur Chipp, president of the Ulster County Blood Bank, asks anyone willing to work three or four hours to call the local office at 339-5525 for further details. Since the introduction of the Group Program by UCBB in April, 1973, membership has more than doubled, Chipp noted. More than 5,300 persons are currently eligible for the various benefits.

The group program as well as the individual membership program is open to anyone living in or working in Ulster County regardless of age, physical condition, race, or creed. Those who are not members are encouraged to find out about the UCBB blood assurance program.

During the first 11 months of 1973 UCBB furnished more than 98 per cent of all blood used in the Benedictine and Kingston Hospitals, and some blood for the Ellenville Community Hospital.

All blood from donating members remains in Ulster County for use in local hospitals. Among UCC services is membership in the American Association of Blood Banks Central Office Consulting Service in Chicago, which has more than 4,000 individuals with rare blood types listed on a computer.

Urging county residents to enroll in the program, Chipp noted: "You may not be dying to give blood, but someday you may be dying to have some."

Woodstock LWV Hosts Panel Between Towns

WOODSTOCK Representatives from the Hurley, Olive, Woodstock and Shandaken town planning boards have been invited to outline the major land use problems of their communities at a program to be presented Jan. 9 by the Woodstock League of Women Voters.

The program is a part of a LWV study begun in 1972 on evaluation of land use policies and procedures and their relationship to human needs, population trends, and ecological and socio-economic factors.

Others who will be present for the meeting are Herbert Hekler, Ulster County planning director, and Harold Finkle of the Temporary State Commission to Study the Catskills. They will speak on county and regional land use.

The public is invited to attend the meeting, which will be held in the Woodstock Town Hall beginning at 8 p. m.

Youth Cited on Break-in

A 16-year old Hurley youth was arrested Sunday night, accused breaking into the home of Donald Briggs of Orchard Street, in Hurley.

Hurley State Police said they were tipped off about the burglary and staked out the home for about two hours before observing the youth open a window and climb in. According to police, the boy said he was looking for money when apprehended inside the home.

The youth was arraigned before Town of Kingston Judge Robert Ferrigan and released in the custody of his parents.

Bob Smith of Richmond led the East's offense, scoring two touchdowns and leading two rushers with 79 yards.

Joe Barnes ran for one touchdown and rifled scoring passes of 79 yards to Lawrence Williams and seven yards to American tight end Andre Tipton, helping No. 11 Texas Tech to its Gator Bowl victory over Tennessee.

Scott's Shuffle Surprised Bucks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Pistons got it together Sunday night long enough to beat the powerful Milwaukee Bucks 98-91 with a revamped lineup. Scott decided to shuffle the deck a bit after Detroit lost three of its last four National Basketball Association games, installing George Trapp at forward and John Mengelt at guard.

Trapp wound up with 16 points, six of them down the stretch, and Mengelt had nine. But it was veteran guard Dave Bing who kept the young Pistons in the game when Milwaukee threatened to break it open in the third quarter.

Bing finished with 22 points and Bob Lanier had 20 for Detroit. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar paced the Bucks with 30 points.

In other NBA games, the Atlanta Hawks held off the Cleveland Cavaliers 99-94; the New York Knicks whipped the Kansas City-Omaha Kings 102-85; the Los Angeles Lakers got by the Buffalo Braves 108-105; the Seattle SuperSonics surprised the Golden State Warriors 96-92; and the Portland Trail Blazers defeated the Chicago Bulls 99-92.

The Indiana Pacers won the lone American Basketball Association game 109-108 over the San Diego Conquistadors.

Hawks 99, Cavaliers 94
Lou Hudson sank three foul shots in the final 30 seconds to insure the Atlanta victory. Hudson wound up with 27 points for the night, 13 of them in the fourth quarter, while Pete Maravich led the Hawks with 29.

Knicks 102, Kings 85
New York opened up a 30-point lead in the third quarter and coasted home. Dave DeBussche topped the winners with 34 points in 36 minutes of action.

Lakers 108, Braves 105
Jimmy Price hit a career-high 27 points, including three key baskets in the closing minutes, for Los Angeles.

Sonics 96, Warriors 92
Jim Fox scored 29 points and Don Watts had 18 for Seattle. Cazzie Russell scored 35 points for the Warriors.

Blazers 99, Bulls 92
Portland reeled off 10 straight points in the final period to go on top for good. John Johnson finished with 24 points and Sidney Wicks added 21 for Portland. Chet Walker netted 31 for Chicago.

Pacers 109, Q's 108
Roger Brown sank a pair of free throws with just three seconds left to give Indiana its third straight victory, the first time this season the Pacers have won three straight.

Saturday's NBA results: New York 112, Philadelphia 92; Boston 111, Cleveland 92; Atlanta 114, Houston 110; Kansas City-Omaha 106, Capital 102; Chicago 108, Detroit 103; Buffalo 120, Phoenix 108; Golden State 102, Los Angeles 100.

UCLA Was Again Ungracious Host

By United Press International

UCLA played host in its own Bruin Classic Saturday night and, as is its custom, was less than gracious.

Another visitor, this time Michigan, left Pauley Pavilion with one more loss than it had when the game started.

The Bruins shackled the Wolverines, 90-70, for their 83rd straight victory.

Ranked teams had their problems in Christmas tournaments over the weekend, but all previously unbeaten Wisconsin teams making it to the final in the finals of the Milwaukee round collected the titles.

Nothing Odd About Peter

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter McDuffe, placed in action after the New York Rangers' top two goaltenders were sidelined with injuries, considers himself the odd man.

But there was nothing odd about the performance he turned in against Minnesota Sunday night, weathering a 40-shot barrage and stopping a probable tying goal as the Rangers defeated the North Stars 4-3 in the National Hockey League.

"I know I'm the odd man here," McDuffe said. "That's why I'm hoping to land with an expansion team next year."

McDuffe got the starting nod since goalie Eddie Giacomin was out with a pulled hamstring muscle and Gilles Villeneuve was nursing a knee injury.

He helped preserve the Ranger victory when he used his leg pad to stop a shot by Minnesota's Danny Grant with one minute left to play.

"Grant should have scored that last-minute goal," moaned North Stars Coach Parker MacDonald. "We had no luck at all. Any time you get 40 shots on the Rangers you should be able to win. Maybe if we keep up that kind of shooting it will pay off in the future."

Jim Neilson scored the eventual game-winner after nine minutes of the third period when he backhanded the rebound of Rod Gilbert's shot past Minnesota netminder Cesare Maniago. Jude Drouin trimmed New York's lead with a goal at 10:11 of the final period, but the North Stars couldn't manage the equalizer.

Danny Grant opened the scoring when he took a pass from Dennis Hextall and beat McDuffe at 7:53, but New York then tied it at 18:37 when Rod Seiling connected on a 58-foot shot.

Fred Stanfield gave Minnesota a brief lead when he tallied from the slot at 3:20 of the middle period, but Bobby Rousseau netted a rebound at 6:54 to make it 2-2.

Pete Stemkowski gave the Rangers a 3-2 lead in the final period before Neilson scored his goal.

Buffalo Coach Joe Crozier and his Philadelphia counterpart Fred Shero were both unhappy over the officiating in Sunday night's 5-4 Flyers victory for two different reasons.

"The refereeing was the worst I've ever seen," declared Crozier. "Philadelphia was elbowing, cross-checking, doing everything, and they just let it go."

"There were a lot of penalties that shouldn't have been called," countered Shero. "The fans were yelling but they don't know what is a penalty and what isn't most of the time."

Referee Bryan Lewis called eight penalties in the game, six of them on the Flyers who set a National Hockey League record for penalty minutes last year and are ahead of that pace this time around.

Elsewhere in the NHL, the Detroit Red Wings doused the Atlanta Flames 4-2, the New York Rangers edged the Minnesota North Stars 4-3, the Toronto Maple Leafs stopped the Chicago Black Hawks 4-3 and the Boston Bruins pounded the California Golden Seals 8-1.

Tom Bladen snapped a 4-4 tied midway through the final period for the Flyers who lead the West Division by three points. Bobby Clarke, Ross Lonsberry, Rick MacLeish and Andre Dupont got the other Philadelphia goals.

Red Wings 4, Flames 2
Ace Bailey's unassisted goal 21 seconds into the second period proved decisive for Detroit. Marcel Dionne added a pair of scores for the Wings while Larry Romanchuk and Randy Manery connected for Atlanta.

Bruins 8, Seals 1
Rookie center Chris Oddleifson, a former first draft pick for California, scored four goals for Boston, two of them in the final period. The first-place Bruins lead Montreal by five points in the East Division.

Cornell Scores Fourth Syracuse Tourney Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cornell University has collected its fourth victory in five years to maintain domination of the Syracuse Hockey Invitational.

The Big Red posted a 3-1 triumph over Colgate Saturday night as sophomore Brian Campbell scored the go-ahead goal with 12 minutes to play. Bob Peace's goal three minutes later put the game out of reach.

In other upstate New York hockey action, Boston University bowed 8-2 to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute but still won the RPI tournament, and Waterloo of Ontario bombarded another Ontario team, Royal Military College 10-0 in the Oswego Holiday Hockey Tournament.

Boston University, after winning its first two RPI tournament games, had the championship wrapped up before it took the ice. RPI fired in three quick goals and coasted to an easy victory.

Dartmouth had a long shot at the RPI title, but it fizzled when the team tied Ohio State 3-3 earlier in the evening.

Ron Hawkshaw, Mike Giomond and Bob Madely each scored two goals for Waterloo in the Oswego tourney.

Stones' Flop Style Set World Record

Track Yeander By BILL MADDEN UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — One year removed from the triumph and tragedy of the Olympics, track and field returned to Munich, Germany, for its most dramatic moment of 1973.

The date was June 11 and the man was Dwight Stones, a 6-foot-5, 170-pound stringbean of a high jumper from Glendale, Calif., who flip-flopped his way to a world record leap of 7 feet, 6 1/4 inches.

After two previous misses at the height which would better Pat Matzdorf's standing mark of 7-6 1/4, Stones, using his customary Fosbury Flop style, soared over and then waited motionless in the pit for about 20 seconds as the bar teetered in the uprights before settling in place.

A year earlier, at 18, Stones had come out of nowhere to capture a bronze medal at that same stadium. Now he was mobbed by his joyful American teammates before taking a triumphant jog before the 25,000 satisfied track enthusiasts who had witnessed an Olympic-type performance. There were, however, quite a few other track performers from vastly different backgrounds—who shared the record breaking headlines with Stones.

Al Feuerbach, an unlikely looking shotputter (only 6-feet, 250-pounds amid the giants of some five inches taller who have dominated this event in recent years), broke Randy Matson's "unassailable" mark of 71 feet, 5 1/2 inches which had stood since 1967.

Feuerbach, one of only a handful of shotputters ever to clear 70-feet, threatened Matson's mark repeatedly this year before topping it with a heave of 71-7 on May 5 at San Jose, Calif.

Ben Jipcho, a 30-year old prison guard, finally emerged from the shadow of his Kenyan countrymate Kip Keino by shattering the world steeplechase record twice in one week and, a few days after, followed that up with the third fastest mile ever.

Jipcho, who finished second to Keino in the '72 Olympic steeplechase, turned in a world record time of 8:19.8 at Helsinki in late June only to slice five more seconds off that mark less than a week later with an 8:14.0 clocking on the same track.

Moving on to Stockholm three days later, Jipcho established himself in the eyes of many track observers as a real threat to Jim Ryun's heretofore unapproachable mile records. Showing little respect for his own age, Jipcho raced to a 3:52.0 mile win at Stockholm, a time eclipsed only by Ryun's world record of 3:51.1 and the Kansan's previous world mark of 3:51.3.

In the short races, Rod Milburn of Southern U. proved his Olympic hurdle dominance was for real by breaking, equalling or lowering his own records, it seemed, every time he ran. As it was, twice Milburn tied the standard of 13.0 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles and also set a record of 13.1 for the 110-meter event.

And in the 100-yard dash, Steve Williams of UCLA became the latest to equal Bob Hayes' mark of 9.1 seconds.

On the indoor circuit, a sandy-haired Californian named Steve Smith was making a name for himself among the world class pole vaulters. Bedecked in a multi-colored paisley jump suit, Smith thrilled a Madison Square Garden Friday night track crowd by becoming the first man ever to clear 18 feet indoors on Jan. 26. Afterward, he proclaimed a 19-foot vault was in the immediate realm of possibility. "I'm the best pole vaulter, indoors, outdoors in America, in the world," Smith said. But injuries curtailed his outdoor performances and he never threatened Bob Seagren's standing world mark of 18 feet, 5 1/2, inches.

While Jipcho, Feuerbach, Williams, Milburn and Smith were making waves on the amateur circuits, a couple of their more publicized predecessors—Ryun, Keino and Seagren—helped launch the new professional International Track Association which barnstormed around the country to mixed success.

Opening in Pocatello, Idaho, the pros, who used gimmicks such as trailer lights, foot races between a 270-pound shotputter and various women sprinters, plus Marty Liquori as a public address announcer, provided excitement amid a carnival atmosphere but had few record-breaking performances.

High jumper John Radetich emerged from obscurity to leap 7-4 3/4 in the Pocatello meet, while Keino outshone his old mile rival Ryun in the few times they met head-to-head in the specialty.

Seagren, hampered by injuries, was unable to match Smith's 18-foot indoor pole vault standard, while former UCLA star Warren Edmondson, who midway through the season revealed he had received a bribe to throw a race, dominated the sprints on the pro tour.

The other noted pro sprinter was Brian Oldfield, who was really a shotputter. The burly, 6-5, 270-pound Oldfield fired off the three longest indoor throws of all time—70-9 1/2, 69-11 1/2 and 69-11 1/4—to easily establish himself as the star of the pro circuit. But as an added attraction, Oldfield emerged victorious every week against a frustrated parade of women sprinters who would challenge him in a special 30-yard dash.

"I really kinda dig having women chasing me," was the Riggs-ish reply Oldfield offered for his fast-growing legend.

Grapes Were Sour for Nelson Briles

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — If anyone has had the occasion to say the grapes are sour, it's Nelson Briles.

Last year, when he won 14 games and lost 11, he went 33 innings at the end of the season without a supporting run.

He was the starter in five of the 14 shutouts pitched against the Pirates in 1972.

He won 14, lost 13, and had a 2.84 Earned Run Average to lead Pirate pitching this year, but despite a solid performance, he entered the month of June with only one win.

Briles will tell you he was the victim of a folding act, as the Pirates simultaneously shut down their offense and defense for most of the season.

But Briles says he's leaving Pittsburgh with a much healthier future than when he came, so there were no sour grapes when he was traded to the Kansas City Royals in a five player deal earlier this month.

The Pirates have imported Ken Brett from Philadelphia and Jerry Reuss from Houston and are hoping that veteran Steve Blass will return to form next season.

"With that surplus of pitching, I guess they figured I was expendable. We all are, at some time or another."

A drama student when he attended Santa Clara University, Briles was one of the few Pirates who capitalized on the 1971 World Series championship.

The notoriety led to local night club engagements, a TV sportscasters job and record and film commitments which he'll begin filling in January.

"I had my first exposure to television here and this was the first place where I worked seriously in a full night club act," Briles said.

The ten-year veteran said when he was traded to Pittsburgh from St. Louis in early 1971 "a lot of people thought I was on the way down."

But, he said, the Pirate stint has "rejuvenated" his baseball career and given him something to aim for after retiring from professional sports.

"The way they accepted me here on stage," he said, "that has given me the desire to pursue a career in entertainment. Before I came here I just used to fool around and do it for kicks."

Briles admits he was "surprised" when Pirate General Manager Joe L. Brown informed him of the trade, which sent infielder Fernando Gonzalez along to Kansas City in exchange for catcher Ed Kirkpatrick, infielder Kurt Kevacqua and first baseman Winston Cole.

"Even though my record didn't indicate it, I had a good year. Fourteen wins is a very deceiving record."

"I'm basically not an overpowering pitcher. I rely on control and defense to win and our defense was just below par this year."

Briles said he couldn't pin the Pirates' disappointing season on any one problem.

"We didn't have any special type of internal problems that any club did not have from time to time," he said. "We just didn't play the type of ball we could have. We made mental as well as physical mistakes and suffered from spotty concentration and overall inconsistency."

"We were caught suddenly without a rightfielder, a superstar. We had to experiment, and the experiment didn't work."

Shirley Babashoff Swims Nearly Ten Miles a Day

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — records in the 200-meter free style, 2:04.38, and the 400-meter freestyle relay, the same as her gold medal Olympic time.

Today, she's still swimming. Her goal: "To be on top."

Shirley's swimming career was temporarily disrupted in November when her Olympic mentor, Flip Darr, announced an early retirement. However, she made a smooth transition to another coach, Mark Schubert.

Shirley, a 16-year-old senior at Fountain Valley High School, known to all her friends in and out of the aquatic circle as "Fish," continues an arduous schedule that revolves around pre-dawn and twilight workouts—four and a half hours daily on weekdays and five hours daily on weekends.

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

PRINCIPLE (Q): Carl says if I love him I will not go out with any other boy. But he doesn't want to go steady with me. I would like to go steady with him. At the same time, I feel that as long as we are NOT going steady I should be free to go out with other boys.

There are two others I have had dates with and like. Carl doesn't have dates with any girl besides me. But I feel that a principle is involved here and would appreciate your advice.—Cheri in New York.

(A): A principle definitely is involved and you see it clearly. I suspect that Carl is less mature than you and afraid of responsibility and reality. Some people grow out of this condition. Some don't.

One of the other boys might be better suited to a clear-minded person of your sort than Carl is. Consider that possibility.

BAD NAME (Q): I have a bad name in my town. In high school I was popular and I liked to have a good time. So I had a good time, with more girls than one. Some of them talked about it. Now every decent girl here knows about me and not one of them will have anything to do with me.

I have a chance to move to another town 50 miles away and go to work for my uncle. He is a general contractor. Do you think I should? I am 12.—Blacklisted in Pennsylvania.

(A): If you want to move just so you can find more girls to have a high time with, starting over would do you no good. But if you are willing to start over not only in a new place and with a new job, but also with a new attitude toward girls and a good time, I urge you to do so.

3-Day Work Week in Britain

LONDON (AP) — Amid confusion, foreboding, and much uncertainty, Britain began a three-day work week today to conserve its reduced supply of coal for production of electricity.

The cutback because of the coal miners' refusal to work overtime will affect about 12 million Britons out of a labor force of 24 million, economists estimated.

Nonessential businesses and industry will be supplied electricity only three days a week, either from Monday through Wednesday or Thursday through Saturday. They can stay open other days only if they operate without electricity or have their own generator.

Many firms have not announced their shortened schedule, and many Britons reported for work today not knowing whether they should be there or whether they would receive a full week's pay at the end of the week.

Critical industries that are exempt include public utilities, food processors and distributors, hospitals, communications media and restaurants. Such "continuous process" plants as the steel mills, where the product would be ruined by a break in operation, can continue to operate around the clock, but they must cut electricity consumption 35 per cent. Shops may stay open six days a week but, can use only three hours of electricity a day.

Prime Minister Edward Heath ordered the work-week cutback after the miners' slowdown had reduced coal production 30 per cent. Union leaders charged that his action amounted to a national lockdown and that he was trying to make the miners the scapegoat for his "disastrous management of the nation's economy."

But James Prior, the Conservative government's leader in the House of Commons, warned that the country faced catastrophe without the restriction of electricity. He said if industry continued to operate full blast, there wouldn't be enough power to maintain the water supply and the streets of London and other cities would be "awash with sewage."

The miners are demanding pay increases ranging from $14 to $28 a week, which the government says is above its anti-inflation wage increase ceilings. The government claims miners' earnings average about $98 a week and this would rise to $112.80 if the guidelines are observed.

The miners' leaders and the National Coal Board resume negotiations Wednesday. There is talk of giving the men more money without raising their base pay by paying them portal-to-portal, for the time they take getting to and from the coalface and washing up after work.

Alert for Israeli Troops

By United Press International
Israeli troops went on high-level alert along the Middle East cease-fire lines today to guard against any possible Arab attacks during voting in Israel's crucial national elections.

The military command in Jerusalem reported a dozen clashes with Egyptian troops at the shaky Suez Canal truce lines Sunday, with the second Israeli soldier wounded in two days.

The command said the Syrian cease-fire lines were quiet during the day, but Damascus appeared to be massing artillery and infantry units in the region.

Prime Minister Golda Meir's ruling Labor party fought for its political life in today's national election expected to determine Israel's bargaining position at the Middle East peace talks in Geneva.

Public opinion polls showed detailed discussions on troop disengagement.

Mrs. Meir's party and Menachem Begin's rightist Likud coalition running even in the race for control of the 120-seat Knesset (parliament) with 20 to 40 per cent of the voters undecided.

In Cairo, the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram said today Egypt expected the peace talks to enter a "decisive and critical" stage Wednesday with Israeli forces on the west bank of the canal made major advances in the two days following the truce order, cutting off Egypt's 3rd Army in the Sinai Desert at the south of the waterway.

The newspaper said Egypt was also pushing for a later troop pullback accord under which Israel would pull its troops back into the Sinai 22 miles east of the 102-mile-long canal.

Israel has insisted on a pullback of its troops to the east bank of the waterway in exchange for a withdrawal of Egyptian forces to the west bank, leaving the canal between the opposing armies.

Intense Security Precautions for Northern Ireland

BELFAST (UPI) — British troops and police imposed intense security today for the swearing-in of a moderate coalition government granting the Roman Catholic minority its greatest voice in the history of strife-torn Northern Ireland. Security forces closed all roads between Catholic and Protestant areas of Belfast today before the swearing-in ceremony at Stormont Castle outside of the capital.

The ceremony marked the handing over of the province's internal administration from the British government to the 15-member "executive" of Protestant and Catholic moderates. The coalition body will run schools, housing, local government and community relations. Britain, however, still retained control of internal security, defense, external affairs and much of the province's tax system.

"We don't quite know what to expect, but we are certain that the power-sharing executive is to the liking of neither set of extremists," an army spokesman said.

The coalition government was formed after 20 months of talks between Catholic and Protestant moderates guided by Britain's former Northern Ireland Secretary of State William Whitelaw.

Two bombs exploded within minutes of each other late Sunday in the County Fer-managh town of Enniskillen, destroying a gas station and badly damaging a government office. A telephone caller warned the town's postmaster 15 minutes before the bombs went off and the area was cleared in time to prevent injuries, police said.

Reward Is Posted for Masked Gunman

SOUTH DAYTONA, Fla. (UPI) — The uncle of a kidnapped Daytona Beach coed posted a $5,000 reward today for the capture of a masked gunman who police said barged into a birthday party and held the girl and three friends captive.

Kathy Morris, 20, of South Daytona, was abducted shortly after 12:30 a.m. Sunday after a 90-minute ordeal of terror.

Police said Miss Morris was attending a birthday party for Patricia Malarney, 20, at the Malarney home when a man armed with a pistol walked through the unlocked front door.

"The girls were playing cards and they looked up and there was a man with a gun; he had a cloth over his face and his voice was muffled," said Mrs. Virginia Malarney, mother of Patricia.

FBI agents and sheriff's deputies Sunday began a statewide search for the man described only as black, of average build, and in his early 20s.

George Lubke Jr., a mortgage banker in the Daytona Beach area, offered the $5,000 reward for information leading to the return of his niece.

Mrs. Malarney said she was asleep in an upstairs bedroom throughout the incident. Also sleeping upstairs were her father, her husband John, and a grandson.

Police said the man bound and gagged three of the girls with kitchen towels and fled in a white 1966 Buick owned by one of the girls. He also rifled their purses for money and keys and stole a stereo set.

"We didn't hear anything. He told them not to make any noise and if he had to kill anybody he would kill everybody in the house," said John Malarney, 55, a disabled veteran.

Malarney said the door to the two-story home situated in an exclusive neighborhood of $30,000-$40,000 homes was usually kept unlocked.

"We've raised five children and our house has always been full of neighborhood children coming in and out; we never think of locking the door, but it will be different from now on," said Malarney.

'A Good Year,' Claims Levitt

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—State Comptroller Arthur Levitt said Sunday night in his annual report that the 1972-73 fiscal year was an "exceptionally good" one for New York.

The current fiscal year "seems just as promising," he added.

Levitt reiterated his criticism, however, of the state's accounting system, saying it was "not in accord with modern business concepts."

Levitt said the state ended the 72-73 fiscal year with cash income exceeding outgo by $27.5 million. However, in a renewal of a war of words with the governor's office, Levitt estimated that the actual excess of income over outgo would be in the range of $200 million to $300 million.

"In making this 176th annual report, I must stress more than ever the need for public accountability," he said.

"To assure accurate reporting of the financial facts to the public, we must avoid the distortions to which an undisciplined 'cash-based' system lends itself," the highest elected Democrat in the state said.

Levitt also renewed an age-old dispute between his office and that of former Governor Rockefeller regarding the escalating rate of state borrowing. He said through the extensive use of bonding by public authorities and corporations not subject to public referendum "the State of New York is mortgaging its future to a point which approaches the capacity of public burden."

"There is no justification for passing the constitutional right of the people to vote on the public debt," the comptroller said.
